Now that one hospital expansion is complete, the town now can concentrate on completing efforts for the second. How fortunate Cameron is to face the future with two modern institutions for medical service.

SNIPPING THE RIBBON — Cong. W. R. Poage assists Mrs. W. R. Newton, Sr., snipping the ribbon Sunday afternoon which formally opened the 44-bed addition to Newton Memorial Hospital. Looking on at right are Mrs. W. R. Newton, Jr., and Fred Blake (seated), Cameron business executive.

Poage Dedicates Hospital Addition

Cong. W. R. Poage Sunday cited the advancement of hospital facilities and the medical leadership of the Newton family in dedicatory remarks at the opening of an addition at Newton Memorial Hospital.

About 250 people gathered in front of Newton Memorial Hospital for dedication of the 22-room addition. The hospital building was opened in 1962 with 35 patient rooms. The new addition will accommodate 44 hospital patients.

Cong. Poage assisted Mrs. W. R. Newton, Sr., in snipping the ribbon.

Mrs. Newton is the widow of Dr. W. R. Newton Sr., an early medical leader in Milam County, hospital namesake and Cong. Poage's successor in the Texas Senate of the 1930s.

Dr. W. R. Newton, Jr., chief of staff of the expanded facility, was master of ceremonies.

Cong. Poage told of his hope for a medical school in Temple, saying "I'm convinced we need more doctors in this country. I know the need for a new medical school."

He noted Temple's hospital leadership in the Southwest, citing its 1900 hospital beds and "the more than 100 fellows of the American Medical Society" here. He said Temple had more medical facilities than anywhere in the state of Texas outside of the three largest cities.

He cited the community leadership of Dr. Newton and the contributions to medicine in Milam County by the Newton family.

Cong. Poage, chairman of the U.S. House Agriculture Committee, compared increased costs in modern medicine with costs in modern farming:

"I know this hospital and others across the country like it are performing miracles, but like farming, it takes twice as much to do these things.

"Sometimes I find fault with our hospitals and their costs, but there are many reasons for the new costs," he said.

He said hospitals provide many more services than 40 years ago, that hospitals can make hundreds more tests than available years ago, and "these things cost money."

"It all means we have moved forward," he said. "We don't want them to run hospitals like it was 40 years ago."

"Our whole society is moving forward," he continued, "building as the opportunity presents itself."

Cong. Poage noted the community's debt to the Newton family historically and to dozens of others in other fields of leadership in Cameron.

"This town is fortunate," he said.

Cong. Poage was introduced by N. L. Caperton, Cameron postmaster and former assistant to the congressman.

Citing the work of the Newton family in pioneering medicine were Rep. Milton Schiller of Cameron, and Cameron Mayor E. A. Perrin.

A reception for Cong. and Mrs. Poage was held by Cameron friends following the dedication, at The Texan.

Introduced were Dr. and Mrs. David H. Karney and Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Nigliazzo and members of NMH staff and other guests.

Halloween 'Goes Modern'

Store shelves overburdened with Halloween attractions last week were fast selling out as the big night approached.

Trick or treaters are more likely to appear in horror masks that glow in the dark than the traditional ghost or goblin outfit. Kids were tempted with such modern innovations as spooky putty and 14 inch skeleton and witch 'a-go-go" mobiles with "swingin' Watusi action."

Early Halloween callers will be Trick or Treaters for UNICEF. They will leave Methodist Fellowship Hall at 5 p.m. for the annual Halloween house-to-house canvass for needy children.

Younger children will also leave Methodist Fellowship Hall at 5 p.m. for a costume parade through downtown Cameron. Refreshments will be served to the entire group at the Fellowship Hall at 6 p.m.

A traditional Halloween party at the home of Oxsheer Smith has been canceled this year. Mr. Smith, who will be out of town Thursday night, said he regretted that he had to miss seeing the costumed youngsters this year.

UNICEF volunteers will be renewing a tradition dating to the 17th century when Irish peasants went out on Halloween night asking for money for an annual feast.

Other Halloween traditions have not stood the test of time as well.

On Halloween night in Ireland a traditional supper was Callcannon. It was a mix of mashed potatoes, parsnips and chopped onions. Into the dish were stirred a ring, a thimble, a china pig, a doll and a coin. The finder of the doll would have children, the one who got the thimble would never marry and whoever was fortunate enough to get the coin would have wealth.

In Scotland it was said that if a man would take a three-legged stool on Halloween to a place where three roads crossed and sit on it at midnight he would hear the names of those who were to die during the year. If, however, he took various garments with him and threw them to the fairies as they spoke each name, the fairies would be so pleased they would revoke the death sentence.

One story from 18th century Scotland is sure to chill the bones of the most daring Halloween prankster.

The fable was that witches held a party on Halloween and women, who seemed like other people during the rest of the year, but had sold their souls to the devil, would put a stick in their beds that night. When no one was around they would fly up the chimney on the broomstick, attended by black cats. They met the devil at a place arranged by him, to which he rode on a goat.

The Scotlanders said the witches drank out of horse skulls and danced in a circle. The devil played a bagpipe for the dancing and the revelers were lighted by a torch between the horns of the goat.

When the torch was burned out the witches gathered the ashes which were supposed to be especially potent for casting spells.

Search Continues For Missing Cattle

Investigations were continuing this week on reports of cattle thefts in Milam County, principally in the Milano and Sharp areas.

Sheriff Carl Black said he was working with the Texas and Southwestern Cattleman's Association trying to trace the Milam County cattle. He said losses reported ranged from a few to 18 heifers lost by one local cattleman.

Crestmont Oil To Drill Wildcat In South Milam Field

The Milbur Field in south Milam County, which has had no drilling activity since early this year, had a new wildcat scheduled last weekend.

The test will be drilled by Crestmont Oil & Gas Company of Houston and will be the No. 1 Cliff Blackburn. Location is on a 90-acre lease in Smith Vincent Survey. It is permitted to 6,500 feet and has the Edwards Lime as its objective.

Crestmont's wildcat is approximately 1,200 feet northeast of the Ashland Oil Company No. 1 Blackburn, a dry hole, and 1,900 feet northeast of Luling Oil & Gas Company's No. 1 Coldiron, a producer. Both of these were basal Wilcox wildcats at about 2,600 - 2,800 feet in depth.

There were a few rumors early this spring that an Edwards test probably would be scheduled for the Milbur Field, which has production from the basal Wilcox in the 2,600-2,900 foot depth range. One or two wells in the Navarro lying at about 3,400 feet also have been brought in. Some geologists, however, believe the field may also produce from the Edwards, expected at about 6,000 feet in that area, and the Blackburn will test that formation.

5,000 VOTES SEEN IN '68 GEN-ELECTION

Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. election day, Tuesday, November 5, in all 34 voting boxes in Milam County.

County Clerk Wayne Wieser said they expected about 5,000 votes in the general election. He said 4,368 had voted in Milam County in the 1964 general election.

By late Wednesday, 301 votes had been cast absentee at the courthouse. This is almost twice as many as voted absentee in 1964. Absentee voting ends Friday, November 1.

Wieser said the Marak ballot box will be at the Parish Hall this year. It had formerly been located at the Marak store.

Other voting locations will remain the same, including boxes for Precinct 1 at the Courthouse and Precinct 2 at the Cameron School gymnasium.

Local campaigning for presidential candidates had been slow in Milam County until recent weeks.

The American Party, supporting Wallace - LeMay, sponsored a rally on the courthouse square in Cameron in July.

A Democratic Party headquarters was opened in the Wilson Jewelry building in downtown Cameron this week promoting the Humphrey - Muskie ticket.

Republicans opened a headquarters in Rockdale earlier to distribute Nixon - Agnew election material.

The 10x17 inch ballot in Milam County includes five voting columns this year. Democratic Party, Republican Party, American Party, Independent, and write-in. (See sample of ballot on page 1a second section.)

Biographical sketches of statewide contested offices are published on pages 2a and 3a, second section.

The last of amendment analyses is on page 1a, second section.

A total of 712 youngsters age 1 through 10 were immunized in the Sunday "Measles Must Go" clinics at Cameron and Rockdale.

Dr. C. G. Swift, county health officer and president of Milam County Medical Society, said the clinics were considered successful, a "good turnout."

Only about 1,000 children from 12 months to 10 years were anticipated needing measles vaccination in Milam County.

Vaccine had been available through doctors offices for about three years.

Dr. Swift said makeup shots will be available at the Milam County Health Unit, Cameron, on Thursdays.

Hensley-Russell Buy Firm

Expansion For Cam-Tex

Ownership of the children's wear division of Sunny Isle, Inc., including the Cam-Tex manufacturing facility in Cameron will change hands October 31.

New owners are Hensley - Russell, Inc., with principals Clyde Hensley, Jr., president, and Edison T. Russell, vice president.

Hensley, a former resident of Milam County, has served as general manager of the Sunny Isle Division since its inception three years ago. Prior to joining Sunny Isle, he was vice president of Johnston, Inc., another prominent manufacturer of children's apparel.

Russell also has been associated with Sunny Isle's children's wear division as sales manager for the firm's branded line, "Joni J". He is assisted in the operation of his sales company by his two sons, Ed, Jr. and David.

Charles Wickersham will continue to manage the Cameron facility and all personnel will be retained in their present positions.

Plans to increase production and employment will be accelerated with construction of the new permanent plant scheduled for late 1969.

The firm will occupy a 14,000-square foot home office in the Brook Hollow Industrial area in Dallas, as well as showroom facilities in the Dallas and Los Angeles Apparel Marts.

Sewing production will be concentrated in the Cameron plant and one additional plant in Oklahoma. Total employment in all facilities initially will be about 150.

In an exclusive statement to The Herald Tuesday, Hensley stated: "We are delighted to place our bet in great measure on the people of Cameron and Milam County. I was certain, in originally planning our Cameron plant, that we would find a friendly and cooperative reception here, and we have been more than pleased with progress to date.

"With the concentration of all our efforts into children's dresses exclusively and with the excellent support of our present and future employees, we look forward to establishing one of the most modern and productive sewing plants in the nation here in Cameron."

Drive Continuing For St. Edward Development Fund

Workers are continuing contacts for the St. Edward Development Fund which Wednesday was at $106,450.

Letters were being sent through churches concerning contributions while major gifts contacts continued, officials said.

The Herald in an earlier edition was in error in reporting a pledge or contribution total of $110,000.

Goal for the Cameron - Milam area is $250,000 to be matched by $250,000 from the Order of Sisters of Charity of Incarnate Word, who administer the present St. Edward Hospital, to be torn down and replaced by a 49-bed structure with complete medical facilities.

Hill-Burton committee has authorized funds totaling $500,000 for construction of the one-floor, modern structure south of the present site.

CONVENIENCE FOODS

Is having too little time one of your biggest problems in meal preparation? The growing popularity of convenience foods in the past 15 years has helped solve this.

Meals prepared from convenience foods may cost up to one-third more per serving that foods prepared from home recipes or they may cost less. The average convenience food meal for four costs only 23 cents more than the home-prepared meal.

Whether a convenience food costs more or less than its conventional counterpart depends on the season, cost of handling, labor and equipment costs, packaging, perishability and the volume of production. Some convenience foods actually are cheaper than the fresh forms because they are more compact to ship and store and have a longer shelf life.

Some of the products found to be more economical than the unserviced product include frozen orange juice concentrate, instant coffee and canned or frozen peas and beans. Frozen dinners and desserts, ready-to-serve baked products, and other specialty items usually cost more than the same food completely prepared at home.

Should you buy a convenience food? Keep in mind the value of your time and the amount of time you save by using the product. A comparison study of convenience and home prepared food conducted at the Drexel Institute of Technology revealed that of 31 convenience foods studied 25 could be prepared in less than 5 minutes while only two of the home-prepared items could be prepared in that time.

The average convenience food meal requires only one-fourth as long to prepare as the conventional meal. Your choice of foods also depends on your demand for quality as well as convenience. If the family does not like the product, it will not be a good buy no matter how much time, energy or money is saved.

CARROT CAKE

With fall in the air and your busiest part of the year just getting into full swing, why not try a taste tempting dessert that goes well with this season, a carrot cake.

1¼ cup salad oil, 2 cups sifted flour, 1 teasp baking soda, 2 teasp cinnamon, 3 cups grated raw carrots, 2 cups sugar, 2 T baking powder, 1 teasp salt, 4 eggs, 1 cup chopped pecans.

Combine oil and sugar, mix well. Sift all dry ingredients together. Sift half into oil and sugar mixture and blend. Sift in remaining dry ingredients alternating with eggs, adding one egg at a time, beating well. Add carrots and mix, stir in pecans. Bake in lightly oiled 10" tube pan one hour 10 minutes in a 325 oven. Cool and frost with Cream Cheese Frosting:

Cream ¾ stick oleo, 1 3oz. pkg. cream cheese, add 2 teasp vanilla and gradually add 1 box powdered sugar and blend until smooth.

Modern Turkeys Tasty, Economical

Modern processing and packaging has transformed a once-a-year feast bird into wholesome turkey within easy price range of nearly every food budget the year around.

Stores are promoting turkeys this time of year: they are plentiful, according to Mrs. Gwendolyne Clyatt, Extension consumer marketing specialist.

In the processing, air-tight plastic bags are shrunk skin tight around freshly dressed birds to safeguard their fresh flavorsome qualities. The bird then is frozen.

Turkey meat is so tasty, and economical, too, that demand for it continues to increase. During the decsade from 1920 to 1929, Americans ate an average of 1.6 pounds per person per year. Use of turkey meat has continued to increase to a high of about 8 pounds per person last year.

Modern turkeys, too meaty to fly, carry 50 percent meat in proportion to bone than their wild ancestors, says Mrs. Clyatt.

Present-day turkey farms are highly specialized operations and flocks generally number in the thousands. Formerly, just a few birds were raised on scattered farms.

Canned turkey, frozen turkey pies, specialty items such as smoked turkey, sliced turkey and gravy, turkey tamales, turkey pizza, and turkey TV dinners are available in most food stores.

Boneless rolls or turkey roasts are also popular offerings; they may contain up to 40 percent dark meat with the remainder white or they may be all white or all dark meat. Only the meaty portions of turkeys are used in boneless products.

If you like to buy the whole bird to cook - you're in luck. Turkey's such a versatile food you can serve it often in many different ways.

ASCS

By Alva E. Sanders

The following details are being announced for the 1969 Upland Cotton Program:

A referendum will be held by mail during the period Dec. 2 through 6, 1968, to determine whether farmers approve marketing quotas for the 1969 crop. Notices of farm acreage allotments will be mailed to operators of cotton farms prior to the referendum.

For the 1969 crop, the farm domestic acreage allotment has been set at 65 percent of the farm acreage allotment, the minimum authorized by law. Farmers who sign up to participate in the program and who plant at least 90 percent of their farm's domestic acreage allotment, but not in excess of the permitted acreage for the farm, will be eligible for price support loans and for price support payments on the farm domestic allotment.

The skip-row rules which were in effect for the 1968 crop will be applicable to the 1969 crop. In general, under these rules, only the land actually planted to cotton is counted as cotton land in determining compliance with program provisions.

The final date for filing applications for the transfer of cotton allotments is December 31, 1968. Producers in 394 cotton - producing counties in the U.S. have approved for 1969 the transfer of allotments to farms outside the county. Allotments, however, cannot be transferred from one state to another.

The projected state yields are based on 1963-67 harvested yields, adjusted for abnormal weather conditions, for trends, and for changes in production practices and are used to determine cotton program payments. The state projected yields average out to the national yield of 545 pounds. The projected yield for the State of Texas is 421 pounds per acre.

Additional program provisions applicable to the 1969 upland cotton crop will not be announced until after the November 8 crop report but before the referendum period.

KNITS REQUIRE SPECIAL CARE

With the increase of knit fashions, knowing the care they require is important.

Check the fiber content of the knit garment or piece goods you purchase and pass the information along to your dry cleaner, recommends Graham Hard, Extension clothing specialist. Many knit garments do hot have permanent labels. Therefore, your drycleaner has no way of knowing the fiber content unless you give it to him.

The Texas A&M University specialist stresses this because acrylic knits must be handled differently from wool knits. Knits of textured acetate require special handling in drycleaning. Knits containing heat-sensitive fibers should usually be air-dried and often cannot withstand the steam of finishing.

FINDING FISH

Finding white bass is easy, providing you know how. Perhaps the easiest way on most of Texas' large impoundments is to watch for the birds.

When you see a flock of gulls diving down into the water, it is a sign that the whites are chasing shad. And that's a cue for you to chase the fish.

Cast a heavy, fast sinking spoon near the edge of the activity. You will discover that the whites usually are deep down and dining on the injured shad that sink to the bottom.

Once in awhile you'll latch onto a big old lazy black bass down there, too.

CANNED BAITS FOR CATS

Looking for a good way to bait your favorite fishing hole?

Try canned dog food, preferably the kind that makes gravy by adding a little water. Punch a hole in each side of the can with a nail or an ice pick. Tie a rock to the can and drop it into the water.

Or, if you use the kind that's served in a sack, drop it into a loosely knit potato or citrus fruit sack, weight it down good then lower it into the water.

FISHING THE POINTS

When you're fishing around points it's always safe to leave your outboard motor running. That way you can avoid slamming into the bank when a gust of wind hits the boat.

Another good idea is to reverse the motor and troll backwards.

Cast close to the bank and work out — this is one of the surest methods of catching fish. Especially is this true when fishing by rocky shorelines.

Cast against the rock and let the lure fall into the water. Give it a moment to sink, then jiggle the bait.

If there is a fish around it very likely will take your lure.

If you use split shot sinkers, here's a good way to keep them from slipping. Insert a short piece of rubber band into the slot in the sinker, along with the line. Then crimp the shot over the rubber band.

Outmoded Codes Increase Cost Of Modern Housing

COLLEGE STATION

Outmoded building codes increase the cost of housing by prohibiting the use of newer and cheaper building products and construction methods, according to Jane Berry, Extension housing and home furnishings specialist.

Although houses built under antiquated codes cost more, they may not be better houses.

Building codes, one of the oldest controls over local house-building industry, protecrs life, safety and health. They govern the types of construction materials, relation of materials to design, sanitation facilities and other features, explains the specialist with Texas A&M University.

The codes also can determine whether a house is built with or without excessive expenses of labor and building materials.

But all building codes do not accomplish these purposes, according to Mrs. Berry.

Some cities operate under outdated specification - type codes which prescribe out-of-date and uneconomical types of building materials and methods of construction. Codes need constant revision.

For example, in some cities, codes dictate roof trusses be spaced 16 inches apart on the center. Engineers and building experts agree that in residential communities 24 inch spacing gives a roof the strength it needs. Because the codes demand it, homeowners pay about $100 extra for unnecessary trusses, Mrs. Berry cites.

The performance code, stating what a structure must do, or how a material must perform, is more contemporary. Under it architects builders and homeowners are free to choose the best or cheapest

Badgers Keep Winning Streak, Hit Milano 36-20

The undefeated Buckholts Badgers downed the Milano Eagles Friday night, 36-20, but not without a struggle.

Milano halfback Bruce Coldiron ran 37 yards for a score in the first quarter. The kick failed.

Then Badger tailback Norman Haisler took the Eagle kickoff and ran 50 yards for a TD. An extra point pass failed.

It was nip and tuck as Eagle Ethan Williams scored with a 55-yard run and Badger Haisler took a two yard pass in the end zone. Both teams' PATs were no good. The score was 12-12.

The Badgers pulled ahead in the second quarter when tailback Arthur Layton made a 21 yard run to raise the score 18-12 at halftime.

Two third quarter Haisler runs widened the Badger lead.

A one-yard run through the middle by Coldiron and a successful kick gave Milano its last score for the night.

Buckholts' last touchdown came with one minute left as Haisler scored on a 33-yard pass-run combination.

'I' Formations Will Collide In Caldwell-Yoe Tilt Friday

Two I formation dubs will meet 8 p.m. Friday at Caldwell Field when the Yoemen seek a second 19AA victory on the road.

The Yoe-Hornet contest is slated to be a continuation of two previous close ballgames when in 1967 the Yoemen won 14-13 and in 1966 tied the Hornets, 14-14.

Coach Hal Stanislaw said some kind of virus kept several Yoemen out of classes Monday and Tuesday, including Ronnie Richardson, Tom Jones, Bobby Tapplin, Ken McLerran and Lorace Cavanaugh.

He said all the boys will be fit by game time Friday. Only end John Hosch will be unable to make the Caldwell trip. Jerry Richardson and Dennis Crouch will share the chores at tight end.

Stanislaw also said Ed Whitley had moved to the varsity from the B-team and will be playing at fullback and linebacker.

Cameron faces a Caldwell club that has defeated Navasota 7-6, but lost to Giddings 7-0 and to Hearne 7-6. The scores suggest a close ballgame for the Yoemen.

Stanislaw noted that Hornet quarterback Gary Easter is a good passer from the I formation, same lineup used for the first time this year by the Yoemen.

Stanislaw rated Gregory Kocurek, 203-pound tackle, the best Caldwell defensive lineman and one of the best Cameron will face this season. He included end Paul Batista in praise of Caldwell's line play.

Tough at fullback is Charles Rosas, a 169-pounder.

Probable starting lineups are:

	CALDWELL	CAMERON
QB	Easter	Brashear
WB	Kostelka	Steamer
TB	Butler	McLerran
FB	Rosas	Schigut or Whitley
E	Howell	J. Richardson or Dennis Crouch
T	Weichert	Fisher
G	Worthington	Hurtik
C	Willis	Cavanaugh
G	Flippin	Mueck
T	Broaddus	R. Richardson
E	Brinkman	Tom Terrell or Greg Williams

Tough Yoe Defense Falters In Fourth As Elgin Wins, 7-6

A strong Yoeman defense kept the Elgin Wildcats caged through the first half Friday night, carrying Cameron into halftime with a 6-0 lead.

But the ending saw the Yoemen edged by the Wildcats with a touchdown and an extra point in the last seven minutes of play.

The 7-6 loss by the Yoemen gives them a 1-1 record in District.

Tackle Ronnie Richardson crippled the Elgin offense play after play Friday on the Wildcat home field.

Defensive backing for the Yoemen also came from linebackers Johnny Bailey and John Urban, middle guard John Mayer, defensive halfback Johnny Steamer and end John Hosch.

Hosch injured his knee in the second half, forcing him to leave the game.

Ken McLerran again led the offensive team in yardage gained against a powerful Elgin defense. The sophomore halfback marked 51 yards in 20 carries.

Elgin tailback Aubrey Lewis was the leading ground gainer with 88 yards in 19 carries.

Cameron fans saw former Yoeman Dan Bradley carry for Elgin 13 times for 55 yards.

Bradley, a fullback for the Wildcats this year, also booted the 36-yard punt return which set up the winning score for Elgin.

It was strictly a defensive game for the first quarter. The Wildcats moved the ball 58 yards on six carries to the Cameron 10 with a fourth and 2 situation.

The march to touchdown was thwarted when linebacker Norman Trubee broke through to down Elgin's quarterback for a 3-yard loss. Cameron took over on the Yoe 13.

In the second quarter defensive halfback Johnny Steamer intercepted a Wildcat pass on the Cameron 49 and returned 18 yards to the Elgin 33. A personal foul penalty against Elgin moved the ball to the 18.

Quarterback Robert Brashear took to the air with a 12-yard pass to end Tommy Terrell and a first and 6 for the Yoemen.

Ken McLerran carried to the 1 and in the next play McLerran raced over his own left guard for the score.

A Brashear to McLerran pass for the extra points was stopped about a yard from the goal.

Defense again held strong with neither team able to rally a drive. In the fourth quarter the Yoe defense stopped a drive by the Wildcats that took the ball from the Elgin 36 to the Cameron 24 in 12 plays.

Cameron took possession of the ball, but gained only 1 yard in three plays. A personal foul penalty set the Yoemen back on their own 12, forcing a punt.

Bradley fielded the punt on the Cameron 45, broke to his right sideline and raced 36 yards to the Cameron 9 before being stopped.

Four plays later Elgin quarterback Jeff Ferris drove over the goal. The tie-breaking extra point was scored on a kick by Johnny Klemm.

The Eagles went on to down the Lions 34-14 and are now 6-1 for the season. Franklin has a 1-2 record in district play.

Preston Smith

Preston Smith, 56, of Texas, lieutenant governor in his third term, is the Democratic nominee for governor in the November 5 election.

He was born on a farm near Georgetown in 1912 and prides his rise "from the bottom of the heap' working his way through high school in Lamesa and college at Texas Tech in Lubbock, which is now his home and place of business.

Smith's legislatve career began with election to the House of Representatives in 1944. He was elected three terms and then stepped out voluntarily. In 1956 he returned to Austin for six years as state senator from an 11-county West Texas district. In 1962, he won the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor in a five-man race and was elected by a 319,000-vote margin in the 1962 general election. Smith points out he polled 21 percent of the votes in the 1966 Democratic primary, biggest percentage victory in all the 1966 statewide contested races.

Smith emphasizes he avoids endorsing or opposing specific pieces of legislation in partisan or unfair manner as President of the Texas Senate. He has authored or coauthored bills in the Legislature establishing permanent building fund program for state colleges and installing the Gilmer-Aiken program to improve public schools.

"My career in public service is a personal thing with me. I'm not playing a game on anybody's team. When I think it's time to do something that's needed, I get in and do it," Smith says. He was first candidate to announce for governor in August, 1967.

Smith grew up in a family of 13 children and is married to Ima Smith, of Ralls, who also came from a large family, one of 10 children. They have one son, 26, who is married, and are affiliated with the Methodist Church, of which he is a steward in St.John's in Lubbock.

Smith's 18 years of service includes 227 days as acting governor. He emphasizes fiscal responsibilty, limited terms for governor, honesty and integrity in government, and planning for better education, more industrial attraction, application or encouragement improving tourism, job training, relations between people and officials, clean air and water, respect for law enforcement, progress in "our excellent highway system" and consideration of the question of annual or continued biennial legislative sessions.

Two For Small-Town Texas . . .

Texas enters a unique time of political history.

The State's most famous political figure and its only native President is retiring.

He steps away from the White House in a day of complex questioning of national purpose, national direction.

It is a time when states again will, if they can, exercise control over more of their destiny. It is a time when cities are arenas of implosive maelstrom. It is a time when the rural - small town areas are stripped of representation and are faced continually with attrition of every unfortunate kind.

It is a time when counties like Milam and cities like Cameron need a viewpoint in Austin which contends with metropolitan influence with fresh memory of the small city's needs.

Such is the case of Preston Smith, Democratic candidate for governor. He is of Central Texas, born near Georgetown, though a resident of Lubbock these many years. He is incumbent lieutenant governor and has 18 years experience in the Texas Senate and House. He should understand what small towns and counties need in an urbanizing state.

Such is the case of Ben Barnes, Democratic candidate for lieutenant - governor. He is of West Texas, at 30 is young and experienced as Texas House speaker. He came from DeLeon, a small West Texas town. He remembers most recently what the small city and rural county face.

While President Johnson retires to teach, Smith and Barnes aspire for more responsibility in Texas government, each to a higher post. Lyndon Johnson un - questionably has helped Texas as president. His retirement is at a time destined to see greatly strengthened local and state government.

And that is where Preston Smith, the lieutenant governor, and Ben Barnes, the House speaker, can best serve this state and the lesser communities and counties.

Who is qualified to know Texas better than the experienced Smith? And who is qualified to wield the lieutenant governor's gavel better than this young two-time House speaker?

You can answer by voting for these candidates Tuesday, November 5. More than ever, small-town Texas needs the continium of experienced political leadership.

What Others Say . . .

Amen!

Pat Taylor the Democratic nominee for Lieutenant Governor (in N.C.), made a speech recently. What he said should be required reading for every candidate. . .

Taylor attacked candidates who "use the term 'law and order' as campaign slogans without really explaining what they mean or what they propose to do about it.

"I've never raised this issue of law and order in this campaign because I've never met a person who opposes law and order. . . . Everyone agrees we should have law and order. But some would have you believe that they will work some kind of miracle and everyone will obey the law; or that they would overturn the Supreme Court and the Constitution of the United States and the President and everybody else and leave the enforcement of law and the administration of justice to some kind of supreme police force when in the first place they couldn't do it, and in the second place, they really would not do it if they could.

"It may be excessive to call some candidates 'fear preachers,' but there are those who take the serious issues which confront us and turn them into superficial issues, with which they appeal not to your reason, your common sense, but to your anger and reaction.

"These are the extremists, and some of them are hiding behind a front of moderation and claim the label of conservatives.

"If we're going to talk about law and order, let's be honest about it. How much should be put into the State Highway Patrol? How many patrolmen should we have? What additional training should they be given? . . . What should we do about our prison program and facilities? What should we do about some of the situations which breed despair and crime? That is what law and order is all about.

"Our social problems—problems between the races—obviously cannot be solved by rioting and looting, or by irresponsible protest which incites violence. Neither can they be solved by pretending that they don't exist; or by demanding that someone born black and raised in an environment of poverty and ignorance be judged by the same standards and ex - pectations as those of us who are more fortunate.

"You can't pull yourself up by your own bootstraps unless you have boots, and there are still a lot of shoeless children . . . .

"We cannot appease or retreat from those who defy the law, threaten public peace, safety and order . . . yet we will not find any lasting solution to the problem of crime and disorder in the streets through bayonets or chemicals; for even when it is necessary to use them, as it sometimes is, they are at best a temporary solution; and at worst they may degenerate into an emotional outlet for our own frustrations, a cheap substitute for reality and responsibility."

There's only one word to be added to what Taylor said. It is:

Amen.

Panel To Form Guidelines For Press Trial Coverage

By Vern Sanford

AUSTIN

Lawyers and newsmen of Texas have jointly formed a special committee to establish guidelines to protect the right of the free press in covering arrests and trials while at the same time guaranteeing fair treatment of accused persons.

This combination state-bar and news-media panel includes representatives of the State Bar of Texas, Texas Press Association, Texas Daily Newspaper Association, Texas Association of Broadcasters, AP and UPI Managing Editors Associations and Sigma Delta Chi professional journalism fraternity.

The committee is the outgrowth of controversial recommendations made by the Reardon Advisory Committee on Fair Trial and Free Press (American Bar Association). Reardon Committee suggested tight restrictions by courts and law enforcement agencies on information to news media concerning arrests and pending criminal cases. American Bar adopted the restrictions, then urged state and local groups to make them effective.

Purpose of state committee, said Texas Bar President Ralph W. Brite of San Antonio, is "to promote a better understanding between the Bar and news media, particularly in their efforts to support the constitutional guarantees of freedom of the press and the right of a fair, impartial and public trial."

Brite said guidelines will be established for both lawyers and newsmen in release of information related to criminal proceedings.

Bar representatives will include a prosecutor, a defense attorney, a general practitioner and one of the bar's judicial section which is made up of trial and appellate judges.

ABA already has formed a national committee on "guidelines for arrest and trial coverage."

Bar directors also okayed a 13-point legislative program for 1969. One important item is an act to reform the bail bond system. Others high on list call for revision in statutes governing marriage, annulment and divorce, the Marital Property Act of 1967, and an amendment to the State Bar Act to suspend an attorney convicted of a felony. Conviction would disbar the attorney. The bail reform act is to do away with the present system which generally forces a person charged with a crime to pay a bondsman a fee.

ATTORNEY GENERAL SPEAKS

Contractors and repairmen learned with relief that they will not have to absorb the sales tax on materials they use in their work.

Comptroller Robert S. Calvert had held that changes in the sales tax law required them to absorb the tax. But Atty. Gen. Crawford Martin held that the Legislature did not mean to do that, so the repairmen will continue to collect sales taxes from their customers on parts they use for repairs, or the materials they use.

In a variety of other recent opinions, Martin ruled that:

—Comptroller may issue warrants from appropriated funds without regard to invalid restrictions in an appropriations bill.

—Initial terms of members of the Judicial Qualifications Commission terminate November 19, 1967, 1969 and 1971, resepctively.

—Special temporary agricultural permit for truck movement of farm commodities does not permit transportation of equipment such as combines.

—Drive-a-way in-transit license plates are authorized only for transportation of new vehicles moving under own power—not truck trailers and mobile homes. Holder does not have to be a state resident.

—State Securities Commissioner is authorized to see copies of franchise tax reports made to the comptroller by corporations.

—Parks and Wildlife Commission can amend a bond resolution to substitute another co-paying agent for park development bonds without re-advertising or new bids.

—Whether pipeline rental is subject to the sales tax is a fact issue for the comptroller to determine.

—A county attorney could serve as a professor for a college class, but could not accept pay for both jobs.

TEEN DRINKING PROGRAM

Liquor Control Board has launched an educational program to curb drinking by teenagers.

Acting Administrator O. N. Humphreys Jr. said the main objective is to show youngsters problems a single violation of liquor laws can cause them. LCB statistics show 10,672 violations involving minors and 10,184 convictions in the first eight months of the year.

LCB proposes distribution of literature explaining liquor laws to parents and teenagers; lectures in churches, schools and clubs; distribution of informational films and a new reporting system to keep tabs on liquor law violations involving minors (as a guide to areas where education needs to be concentrated).

A single violation, Humphreys warned, can mar the record of a youth for life.

PARKS & WILDLIFE

Expenditure this year of $1.9 million under the $75 million park bond development program has the approval of the Parks and Wildlife Commission.

Bulk of initial expenditure will go to purchasing and developing Dinosaur Tracks State Park near Glen Rose in Somervell County and other parks within two hours driving time of Houston.

Commission adopted a policy requiring its own formal approval of any land purchased by P—W department for state use.

Commission also amended the Tropical Fish or Fish Eggs Importation Proclamation to include the Asian "walking catfish". Fish has been noticed in some pet stores, but isn't popular because it leaves the tank and kills other fish. The amendment calls for a permit to sell or import the aggressive fish to prevent its spread to Texas waterways because of its menace to other fish.

COURTS SPEAK

Supreme Court has scheduled arguments for December 4 in a suit challenging the Fort Worth school district's authority to curb high school fraternity and sorority membership. Lower courts have upheld the school districts.

High court refused a motion for rehearing by the Houston Legal Foundation in a suit brought by four lawyers who claim it is economically harmful to attorneys. The Foundation was set up under Economic Opportunity Act. High court has held lawyers should be permitted to maintain suit.

Court of Criminal Appeals ordered Clifford Darrell Carroll released from death row for re-trial (in view of a U.S. Supreme Court finding) in the scalding death of a two-year-old girl.

OLD PHILOSOPHER

Dear editar:

I was out here on this Johnson grass farm looking at the moon one night while the three astronauts were flying around up there and wondering what if America had been as barren as the moon, would anybody still celebrate Columbus Day, when I stumbled on a newspaper, caught myself just before I fell, and brought it in the house.

On the inside was a long article on life inside a space capsule. Since there is no gravity out there, the article pointed out, things not tied down just float around in the space ship, consequently the astronauts for example can't shave. If they did, the whiskers would float around, probably I guess getting in the oatmeal.

I got to thinking about this in connection with man's future in space.

Say we get to the point where the moon is conquered, somebody opens up a hotel on it, Onassis buys up the rocket fleet, and the jet set prepares to rocket up for a lavish weekend.

As the engines are warmed up for the blast-off, a sign comes on, No Smoking. Then another comes on, No Shaving. Then, No Clipping Fingernails. And, Women Will Not Remove Their Shoes. Also, Fasten Babies Securely.

On an extended flight, taking four or five days one way, space travel is going to have some drawbacks, some of which it's not fitting to go into.

Another article in the same paper reported on the astronauts' colds. First Schirra developed one, then the other two caught his, and all three circled the earth 11 days with stopped-up heads.

There's something puzzling about a science that can conquer space but not a bad cold. You mean to say the only way we can keep from spreading cold germs on the moon when we get there is to boil an astronaut for 20 minutes before letting him out?

There is something inadequate about man if, just as the countdown reaches zero as he prepares a blast-off for a planet 10 million miles away, he misses his aim because he sneezed.

Yours faithfully,

J.A.

To The People Of Milam County, White and Black:

The time has come again to elect a President for this great country of ours. We have Mr. Humphrey Mr. Nixon and Mr. Wallace. We do have a choice. I hope that the white people of Milam County and the entire country will stand up together and vote for a man who will be for all the people and not just a few. I haven't got anything against the Negro, but the white people of America has been talked about and almost condemned by Mr. Humphrey. Mr. Humphrey blamed the white people for everything that has happened in America and today Mr. Humphrey is Vice President of our country. Now think back at the past four years. Something must be wrong with Mr. Humphrey for the President of our country don't seem to have much confidence in Mr. Humphrey or at least we didn't hear too much about what Mr. Humphrey was doing.

Well we do know he knows how to talk against the white people and criticize the other two candidates. Well again Mr. Humphrey did have time enough to take off from his office to go to Atlanta, Ga., to join Mr. Abernathy and condemn the white people again.

Mr. Abernathy caught the time right. He looked over his audience and said I see we have some of the great leaders of our country here today and I am going to call them by their names and if they believe what they have been preaching they will come up to the platform and hold hands with us and sing. So they did just that. Now Mr. Humphrey has made lots of speeches and he, Mr. Humphrey, does know how to praise himself. But again, as long as Mr. Humphrey has been in our government, I don't think that he really knows there is but two states, Alabama and Mississippi, or at least that is the only two states he mentions. Do you want a man to rule this country without knowing where the other 48 states are? Well it is time for all the people of this country to join in together and get a man that knows all about America and also other countries.

Vote George Wallace and you will get a man that will be for all the people and at the end of the next four years you will thank yourself for voting George Wallace.

Thank You,

C. W. Dyson

P. S. Remember what Humphrey would do to our law enforcement officers. He would strip them of their guns.

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS

By Vern Sanford

There is no more dedicated hound in the world than the "Hog dawg".

This is not a special breed that wins ribbons and cups at dog shows. In fact, most hog dogs might be classified as mongrels, crossbreeds and dogs that otherwise wouldn't be worth shooting. But as hog dogs they are tops.

In Texas there are two kinds of hog hunting.

In the Big Thicket of East Texas are the feral or wild undomesticated hogs. They have been bred through generations of hogs that have roamed the thickets, eating acorns, rooting up tender herbs with their tough snouts and breaking into corn cribs. They are lean, lanky and dangerous.

In a way, they represent the Arkansas razorbacks and no doubt some of them are kin.

These thicket hogs occasionally are seen crossing the highways in Southeast Texas. They are hunted as a sport in much of the timbered country.

Hunting them requires mean dogs and tough men. It is a sport all its own. And the dogs which hunt the hogs seldom are good for anything else, although their cousins might be good coon or possum dogs.

These dogs are natural hunters, reviving the instincts of their own wild ancestors in love of the chase. They'll bay a hog and kill it or hold it until the hunters arrive. Most of the time they come away badly slashed, because wild hogs give no quarter in a fight.

In Arkansas, just across the Texas line, some of the hog hunters are using bulldogs. These tenacious, square jawed animals can grab a pretty good sized shoat and shake it to death.

JAVELINA HUNTING

In Southwest Texas there is another type of hog hunting — the javelina or collared peccary. Generally, the dogs are the same offbreeds. They are not much good for anything else.

But you talk with a man who likes to hunt javelinas with a dog and these nondescript pooches are just about as dear to them as their own children.

If anything, they are slightly faster than the East Texas dog, because they have more open country. They are just as dedicated to their work and they don't die easily. Sometimes they are slashed unmercifully by the javelinas. But they keep on fighting.

Because of this dog's tenacity, the javelina hunter follows his hounds as closely as he can. Usually the dogs are smart enough not to engage in a one-dog death battle with a hog.

These dogs have a language all their own. When they bark "treed," all the other dogs in the hunt soon gang up on the hog. Sometimes the air is so thick with hogs and dogs it is hard to separate them.

Although hog dogs are not a special breed, cast in a mold all their own, they are true to the chase and idolized by most who know them.
